Letter of Recommendation

To Whom It May Concern, Zagreb, March 9, 2026.

I am very pleased to recommend Karlo Škorić, a student of Libertas International University in Zagreb, for an internship with European institutions or organizations working on the Western Balkans, youth policy, education, and social justice. I have had the opportunity to observe Karlo's academic development and his engagement in university life, and I consider him one of the most active and intellectually engaged students of his generation at our institution.

In the classroom, Karlo consistently demonstrated a high level of analytical ability, intellectual curiosity, and maturity in discussing complex political and social issues. His contributions were always well prepared and thoughtful, often connecting academic concepts with current developments in European integration, regional cooperation, and democratic governance. He approaches policy questions not only with critical thinking but also with a genuine commitment to public service and social responsibility.

Equally impressive is Karlo's leadership outside the classroom. From May 2023 to October 2025, he served as President of the Student Union of Libertas International University, where he represented the interests of the student body and worked constructively with university leadership to strengthen student participation in institutional decision-making. In this capacity he demonstrated organizational skill, diplomatic communication, and a strong sense of responsibility—qualities that are essential in European institutional environments.

Karlo has also shown exceptional initiative in promoting informed public discussion among students. He is the Co-Founder and Co-Host of the "Libertas Talks" podcast, where he plays a central role in shaping editorial direction, developing content, and inviting prominent guests from academia, politics, and civil society. Through this platform he has helped create an important space for dialogue on European affairs, regional cooperation, and contemporary policy challenges.

In addition, he serves as Executive Editor of the Student Newspaper of Libertas International University, where he coordinates editorial work and encourages responsible and well-informed student journalism. This role further reflects his commitment to democratic values, open debate, and the responsible exchange of ideas.

Karlo combines intellectual seriousness with practical leadership experience and a clear interest in European public policy, particularly in areas concerning the Western Balkans, youth participation, education policy, and social justice. His ability to communicate across different audiences, organize collaborative initiatives, and engage critically with policy questions makes him particularly well suited for work in European institutional and policy environments.

For these reasons, I recommend Karlo Škorić with strong confidence. I am certain that he would bring energy, professionalism, and thoughtful engagement to any internship program within the European Union or related organizations.
